Making Predictions

A good reader uses information in a text and what he or she already knows to think about what might happen next.

Read each sentence beginning. Circle the best sentence ending. The first one has been done for you.

If you eat too much candy before going to bed, your stomach is likely to feel

    a. great

    b. sick

    c. empty

If you put water on a slice of bread, it is likely to get

    a. soggy

    b. bigger

    c. hard

If a dog bites you, you are likely to feel

    a. happy

    b. angry

    c. curious

If you leave a popsicle on the counter on a summer day, it is likely to

    a. stay the same

    b. harden

    c. melt

If you put your hand on a burning log, it is likely to

    a. hurt

    b. tickle

    c. feel great

If you work hard on an assignment, you are likely to

    a. fail

    b. get a good mark

    c. not learn anything